

PROPOSED CHANGES APPROVED BY PAST PRESIDENTS

Past presidents of the Women's Union were asked last night what they thought of the proposed change in the Women's Union Constitution. The proposed amendment is that the Women's Union discontinue payment of $1.00 per year per woman student to the McGill Union.

Marilyn Pickering Wilson, B.A., '52 had this to say: "Confusion has existed over this alliance with the Men's Union for some years. I think it is commendable that attempts are being made to straighten out the situation."

Ruth Taylor Brodeur, B.A., '53, summed up her view thus: "If the women students do not care to belong to the McGill Union as it is now, they shouldn't have to pay a dollar. When they build the new Union, further arrangements should be made to cover the new situation."

Polly Mowat, B.A., '54, could not be reached for comment at press

The speaker at this luncheon will be Miss Dorothy Cadwell who is personnel selection officer for the Civil Service Commission at Ottawa. Miss Cadwell will speak on the opportunities that are open to women with a University degree, in the Civil Service Department of our dominion government.

Lunch will be available to non-resident students for 25 cents. Those who do not wish to eat in the dining room may come up to hear Miss Cadwell speak, at 1:20 pm. This luncheon is designed to give McGill women valuable advice, and a clearer idea of the requirements, type of work involved, and salaries, that pertain to the Civil Service Commission.

FEDERATION OF EUROPE ANSWER TO PROBLEM

Europe needs a governing body with "limited function and real power," Professor Brugman of the University of Europe told students here yesterday.

When France rejected "the only sensible solution to the European problem" by turning down the European Defence Community Treaty, he said, efforts for federation of Europe received a serious set-back. Supporters of federation were at a loss as to what they could now propose. A few weeks ago, he added, they decided to work for economic-integration as a first step towards federation.

Professor Brugman traced the history of the federalists movement in Europe from 1945, when "we were not conscious of the Russian menace" to the present.

Although the fortunes of the Federation movement had suffered from French rejection of EDC, and from the death of Stalin and consequent "wooly thinking" about Soviet policy, Professor Brugman also pointed out some bright spots in the picture.

The recent change back to the "tough policy" of Stalin by the new Soviet rulers would, he felt, be a good thing for European Federation. Even more significant was the British departure from their traditional foreign policy in committing themselves in maintenance of four divisions in Europe for the rest of this century. He noted that the government and people of Britain were now more inclined to see European problems as their own, rather than as problems of a world apart.

But, he said, "this is either too much or too little." If Britain is going to play a part in European affairs, she must assume leadership. Britain, he pointed out, is stronger than any other European power and their natural leader.

Professor Brugman was also encouraged by public support of Federation. He did not think that the issue would die and be forgotten as it was in the '1930's, for there were too many people who felt it was vital.

He stated his belief that a Federation of Europe would "be pushed through" despite the opposition of vested interests and reactionaries. He felt that much had been done by the establishment of the Council of Europe, and the Coal and Steel Community to lay the foundations for federation. Benelux was also valuable, he added, as "a laboratory of integration problems."

DEAN OF STUDENTS LIKES SHOWBUSINESS

by George Schafer

What was her reason to leave her position as Dean of Students and join the hazardous ranks of show business? This was the question this writer had to solve as he went on his assignment to interview Miss Marguerite Shaw.

Associate Dean of Students at American University, D. C., Miss Shaw recently aroused the curiosity of theatregoers when she left her job and decided to play the part of Mabel, the chatterbox bookkeeper, in The Pajama Game. This is the story behind it, as told by herself.

Own Story

"While visiting my sister Reta last summer, she told me that they had some difficulty in casting the role of Mabel for the road company. I jokingly suggested that if they were hard off to find someone, I might consider to try out myself. Reta — a well known actress — created the role for the Broadway production, and since we look and act so much alike the suggestion was realistic, but I wasn't serious about it.

Moreover, I was asked to read the part early in the fall, and I was summoned once again just before Thanksgiving. I got it. The President of the U. was agreeable to give me a one year leave of absence — and here I am."

Background

Miss Shaw, a Bates grad, majored in English and minored in dramatics and phys. ed., but she has preferred to teach the latter two. She took her M. A. in student counseling and personnel administration; she has been in the field of education for 15 years and has held her executive position since 1953.

Problems Even At Night

"I find that travelling with the show is a wonderful experience, and it certainly involves less responsibility than my job at the U."

There are 4,400 students at the American University, out of which 1,200 are full-time undergraduates. These are the ones with which Miss Shaw is particularly concerned. As their Dean, she is in charge of coordinating extra curricular activities and acting as a judge in case of disputes. She is also their personal counsellor; her living quarters are so situated as to enable distressed students to come to her even at night for advice. She is always willing to listen to their problems which range from talking over the reason for a bad mark they obtained to discussing their love life. Boys often consult her about engagement rings and other questions of every day life.

Favours Cheerleaderettes

When questioned about her opinion on cheerleaderettes, she expressed a definitely contrasting view to that of McGill officials. "I do not see anything obnoxious, undignified, or indecent about having cheerleaderettes and they certainly add spirit and effectiveness to the game, and help the team to win." Back in Washington, the University President's youngster is the mascot of the cheerleading group which includes 10 girls and two boys. The faculty has its own cheerleaderettes in its games against the students.

Longing For Her Students

Although Miss Shaw thoroughly enjoys her debut in the theatre, she still would like to be with her students. "I was lonely for students for the first time since I left Washington, as I drove along University Street, and saw them building the snow sculpture," she told this writer, and concluded by saying, "Give my best to the students, for I sort of feel more akin to them than to what I am in now."

A SERIOUS REGRESSION

We think McGill women should be willing to support the McGill Union. It is a building which many women, as well as men, make use of, not only for extra-curricular activities, but for eating, relaxing between classes, and meeting friends.

The Women's Union Executive seems to feel that the Women's Union should discontinue payment of one dollar a year per woman student to the McGill Union.

In the preamble to their proposed constitutional amendment they say:

"Whereas the $1.00 fee to the McGill Union must be used for women's facilities in the McGill Union... and whereas the only facility in the Union building specifically for women students is the ladies powder room..."

Perhaps they forget that only the men's washroom and the billiard room are exclusively for men. Surely it is clear that if women make use of rooms in the Union for eating and relaxing, then these rooms are women's facilities just as much as they are men's facilities.

The preamble goes on to say:

"Whereas the Women's Union considers the chief use of the McGill Union Building by women is through their membership in the activities of the Students' Society, and whereas the Women's Union does not consider itself liable for expenses incurred by the members of the Students' Society of McGill University..."

We would agree that the chief use of the Union Building by women is through their membership in Students' Society sponsored activities. But this is also true of men.

If the men took the same view as the Women's Union and withdrew monetary support from the Union because no exclusively male facilities were available, administration of the Union would be impossible. It seems to us that women, just as much as men, must help to pay for the upkeep of the Union Building.

We would also point out that by the Union House Rules, women are given the privileges of the Union only when they have paid the one dollar fee. If the fee is to be no longer paid, we have to assume that women will be barred from the Union.

In addition, if the women's support is withdrawn, the Union will operate at a deficit. This would have to be made up from Students' Society funds, which would mean that women would still be paying for Union upkeep, but would have none of the privileges. Personally, we don't like this idea.

The brief accompanying the amendment partially explains the amendment in this fashion:

"However, because of the fact that women undergraduates are on this campus under circumstances which differ from those of the men on campus (all women students are members of RVC), and the organizational structure of the Royal Institution for the Advancement of Learning (McGill University, Royal Victoria College and Macdonald College) will not be altered to eliminate this double allegiance for women, the executive of the Women's Union feels that student organizations should respect this situation and pattern student governing bodies after the frame-work of the Royal Institution itself."

Why?

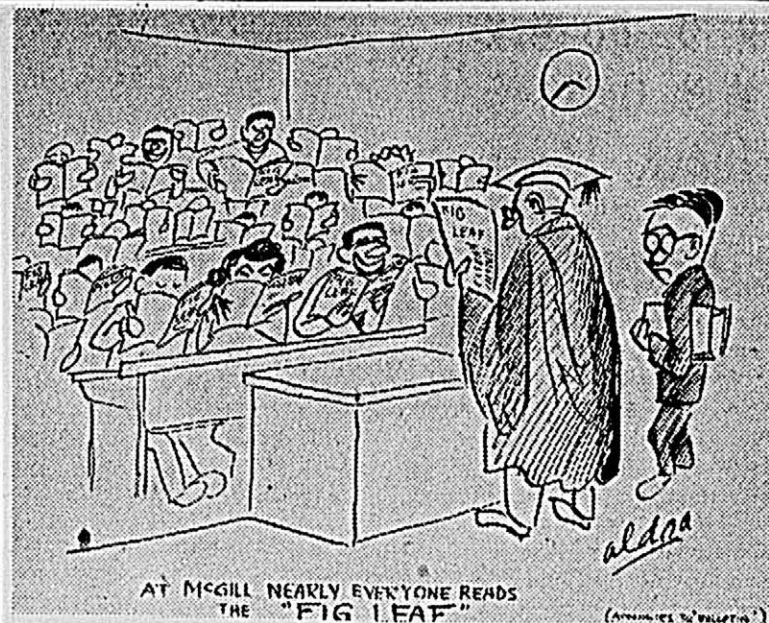

Admittedly the setup of the university cannot be changed. We do not ask that it be altered. But why should the student organizations at McGill follow this division also? When we consider that the students at McGill are split into faculties, years, religions, fraternities, clubs — we wonder why the Women's Union feels that it must further split it into separate organizations for the sexes.

Two other phrases in the brief caught our eye... "by taking this stand on policy, we will... maintain our own position as members of a separate College..." and "The Women's Union may well be called the students' society of the Royal Victoria College."

But do women want to maintain their position as members of a separate college? We suspect that until recently a large majority did not even realize that they were members of a separate college. What do we have a McGill students' Society for, and since it is active, why do women need an RVC Students' Society?

We say the move to make the Royal Victoria College Students' Society more prominent is a regression to the turn of the century.

The SAC

By Morrie Shohet

"Subject to the final policies of the Athletics Board and the Senate, the Council shall be responsible for the administration and control of all University athletics and recreational activities for male students..."

The above paragraph, quoted from the constitution of the Students' Athletic Council (SAC), sums up its purpose and, though vaguely, its powers.

Its Job

More specifically, the SAC sponsors the Athletics Nights, the Winter Carnival, Athletic rallies, the Athletic Awards Banquet, and is responsible for all action taken by the Intercollegiate Athletics Council and the Students' Intramural Recreational Council. Constitutionally, all decisions concerning University athletics must originate in the SAC.

Ten Members

It has five voting members: the chairman of the SAC, the president of the Students' Society, the chairman of the IAC, the chairman of the SIRC, and the chairman of the McGill Women Students' Athletic Association. It has five other non-voting members representing activities which come under its direction. Also included are the Business Manager of the Department of Athletics, ex-officio, and the Director of Athletics, ex-officio.

The Students' Voice

Through the Council, the students have in effect a voice in all athletic matters, in theory that is. In practice this is most often not the case at all. The opening words of the constitution quoted above, "Subject to the final policies of the Athletics Board and the Senate..." limits the effectiveness of the body. If the Athletics Board and the Senate are to approve all decisions made by the SAC, it does not become necessary for the Athletics Department to consult the SAC at all. And this is often the case in practice. Rather than go through the SAC, the Department of Athletics appeals directly to the Athletics Board without any student discussion. The Council is reduced to a necessary "postage stamp" on such matters.

Special Committee

The SAC, consequently, has set up a special committee to investigate the situation and make recommendations. (Continued on Page 4)

Letters to the Editor

Women's Union President Explains...

Dear Sir:

The motion presented to the members of the Women's Union by its Executive Council abolishing the $1.00 fee, per woman, per year to the McGill Union is not intended as a withdrawal of woman's support from a McGill Student Union which we all hope to see constructed in the near future.

But by this move, we are dissolving our association with an organization which by tradition, administration, and method of financing is a Men's Union.

We assume a new Union is to be a Students' Society project. It will not be one if the system of administration and finance now running the present Union building is transplanted into the new one. Reorganization of the Union set-up by the SEC will be necessary to successfully run a new Union Building. We would like to see the SEC appoint a Committee to look into the nature and extent of this re-organization.

Because agreement as the one passed in 1946 on fees confuse the purposes of the Women's Union and the position of the women with regard to a new Union building, we consider that by eliminating it, our support of the new student union will come directly through the SEC and not through our society which is concerned with the interests of women alone. A concentrated effort on the part of all students' through a representative body, we think, would be a more powerful expression of student feeling on this building issue, than approval expressed from several organizations who's professed purposes are widely diversified.

Should an SEC committee work out a plan for equitable administration and support of a new student Union building, I am sure their work would be simplified by the Women's Union's willingness to untangle itself from the association with a men's organization and give its support to a new Union Project at the Student's Society level.

To the question, "Does the Women's Union support the New Union building project?" I would answer, Yes, the Women's Union backs a new student center, supported by Student Society fees, and (Continued on Page 4)

REID, BONDER WIN OPENING TRACK HEATS

Peter Reid, intercollegiate half mile champion, copped the 300 yard dash yesterday afternoon in the Indoor Intramural Track Meet. Reid let Gerry Bonder set the early pace and passed him with 100 yards to finishing well in the lead. Reid's tremendous finishing kick is well known to local track fans who have Reid in the outdoor intramural and intercollegiate. Don Moule finished second.

Bonder Wins

Gerry Bonder just nosed out Bill Duanne in the 60 yard dash, the other event of the meet. Ted Worthington finished third.

The rest of the indoor track events will be run on Wednesday starting at 1 pm. The 500 yards dash will be run first with the relays to follow. Coach Howie Ryan once again stresses the fact that those hoping to make the trip to Hamilton with the team must compete in these trials. Participants are asked to be on time and warmed up so that the meet may be completed during the lunch hour.

NOTICE

Will the snow sculptresses who borrowed equipment from the Redpath Museum to produce works of art on the Campus please return the objects so that we can use them, too? All will be forgiven.

One Possible Solution

By George Rosenberg

It is needless to point out to students who take some interest in campus sports the apathy that exists in the student body as a whole. We hate to use the word "apathy" again, but it seems that it is rapidly becoming synonymous with spectators, or rather lack of spectators, at McGill intercollegiate athletic events. Basketball, of course, is no exception.

Things have reached such a point that there are those around the University who firmly believe that McGill's major sports, basketball in particular, have reached their current low ebb BECAUSE of the apathy. This attitude merely serves to point out the seriousness of the situation, but in reality is a false one.

Let's face it, the apathy is not a cause; it is a result, a result which stems from some of the basic faults of the athletic system at McGill.

A case in point is basketball. We were talking over the situation with Ron Sharp, the intermediate basketball coach. He had some interesting observations concerning the hoop teams at the University.

In his opinion the problem is far more fundamental than simply a lack of athletic scholarships, and active recruiting. Undoubtedly these would prove very satisfactory means of supplying McGill with some top notch basketball material, but, since at the moment athletic scholarships have a very remote chance of becoming part of the athletic set up, we must look for simpler and more feasible solutions to the problem. His solution can be summed up in two words: promote interest.

Sharp suggested that McGill should sponsor four basketball teams instead of the present two. In addition to the senior and intermediate intercollegiate, the University should back two city teams: one in the junior loop, and the other in the city senior "B" circuit. This program would have a two-fold advantage. In the first place the participation angle would receive a much needed boost. More players will be encouraged to try out, and with adequate coaching many of them could achieve senior intercollegiate calibre by the time they reached their senior or even junior year. In other words the city teams would provide a farm system for the intercollegiate quintets.

A second, and even more important, advantage would be the great decrease in releases given to McGill students wishing to play for city teams. Theoretically these releases cannot be granted unless the applicant presents the IAC with some very good reasons. But it is no secret to anyone that the main reason why players are prompted to ask for release is lack of interest in representing McGill. Should McGill, however, sponsor teams in these city leagues, University students would be unable to play for any team in that league except that of the university. After the initial grumbling about dictatorship, and monopoly, and so forth, the release-happy players will get adjusted to the idea, and after a while will be quite contented. And in a matter of a few years McGill won't have to grant a single basketball release to an undergraduate.

The Present Basketball Teams

As has been the case in several years past, the senior team lacks adequate reserves. This was seen very vividly on Thursday night when the Redmen starting quintet kept ahead of the powerful Western Mustangs for nearly half the game. But soon the pace told on the McGillians and they began to lag badly behind the Mustangs who kept sending in regularly their second five.

Convincing evidence of the quality of McGill's starting quintet is the fact that figures released by the league show guard and captain Mel Michalchki and centre man Leon "Dupe" Duplessis in second and third spot respectively in the league scoring. Michalchki is averaging 18 points per game while Duplessis is close behind him with 10.

The intermediates who won eight straight games before losing to R.M.C. finished the season in a tie for first place. The team has at least three players who should be senior material next year. But it won't be surprising if two of them won't return to this school next year. It has been rumored that 6'4" Al Hirsh has to Brown University for next year, while flashy Don Wright, the league leading score with 23 points per game, might to switch to some small U.S. college next year.

As Ron Sharp so wisely remarked: let's forget scholarships, and concentrate on promoting interest.

MAC COEDS PICK QUEEN OF ROYAL WINTER FAIR

By Don Allen

MACDONALD COLLEGE, Que. Feb. 21 — It's a man's job but a woman's world when it comes to choosing a Macdonald College Queen — women pick the finalists, heeding not a word of advice from critical campus males. Queen of tomorrow's Macdonald Royal-Winter Fair—will have been selected from finalists named by women students of School for Teachers and each of four years of Macdonald's Home Economics degree course, student organizers announce. The final verdict is reached by a panel from the Royal executive and senior members of the College staff—and their wives. Which suggests that the fair sex may have the last word as well as the first in picking one of their number to rule.

Judges meet finalists informally at a tea. Their decision is top secret until Coronation of the Queen at the commencement of Royal festivities.

Organizers stress that the selection of a "Queen of the Royal" is more a personality than a beauty contest. Dick Evans of the Royal Committee contrasts it with the choosing of a Queen of the Winter Carnival, by Mac's men as a climax to balloting and week-long competition.

CUS Sponsors Stock Exchange Tour Tomorrow

For all those who are making the trip, the meeting place will be the Assembly Hall at the Royal Bank Building at exactly 2:15 tomorrow afternoon.

Taxis provided by the CUS will leave from the steps of the Arts Building at 1:45, and after a meeting in the Directors' room of the Stock Exchange and refreshments in the Montreal Club, the taxis will be available for return to the campus in time for five o'clock lectures.

WUSC Summer Tours Offered To Students

28 applications are now available for the 1955 International Summer Programme of WUSC. Forms may be obtained from the SEC office and must be turned in to the same place by this Friday, February 25.

Three tours are offered for Canadian students. One study group will go to West Africa to participate in the Summer School in order to make a concentrated study on "West African Background."

The second group will travel to Japan for study on the "Responsibility of Higher Education." The third tour will take students to the West Indies; it will include participation in the Summer School, members of which will study the subject of "The Emerging Caribbean."
